

SAFEGUARDING POLICY

INTRODUCTION – TAKING SAFEGUARDING SERIOUSLY

CRESS acknowledges its duty of care to the community and considers carefully all its responsibilities with regard to safeguarding. We recognise that safeguarding is about how we treat each other, giving people choices and independence, and keeping vulnerable people amongst us safe from harm.

CRESS works with adults in the local community who donate money, give their time and other types of support such as prayer and advice.

The main CRESS activity in the UK is to conduct village hall-based presentations to update the community about its funding programmes for South Sudanese refugees now staying in Northern Uganda. Also, CRESS staff work and conduct meetings, including prayer meetings, in their private houses.

CRESS does not work directly with nor provide care in the UK for adults who may be at risk of or experiencing abuse or neglect (adults at risk) or children. However, as a charity organisation, CRESS has a community responsibility to its donors and all adults and children who attend presentations and prayer meetings.

CRESS' SAFEGUARDING POLICY STATEMENT

CRESS aims to make a positive contribution to a strong and safe community and recognises the right of every individual to stay safe.

This policy seeks to ensure that CRESS undertakes its responsibilities with regard to safeguarding and responds appropriately to all concerns. It establishes a framework to support all CRESS employees, Chief Executive Officer, Trustees and designated volunteers ("staff") in their work for CRESS.

The CRESS safeguarding policy sets out how CRESS seeks to comply with relevant legislation - namely for adults: The Care Act (2014), specifically the statutory guidance on safeguarding adults at risk issued under this legislation, The Human Rights Act (1998); and for children: The Children Act 2004 and Working Together to Safeguard Children (2018).

CRESS also has a responsibility to promote safeguarding awareness and training within the context of the wider community within which they work. This includes within the international community whose projects they support in Northern Uganda with South Sudanese refugees.

CRESS trustees and representatives visiting the CRESS communities in Uganda and South Sudan are expected to behave in accordance with CRESS UK safeguarding guidelines.

DEFINITIONS – TYPES OF ABUSE & HOW TO RECOGNISE THEM

CRESS recognises that safeguarding is about embedding practices throughout the organisation to ensure the protection of children and adults at risk wherever possible. In order to do this it is important here to clarify for all CRESS staff what abuse or neglect is and to recognise the signs so that we are clear what we are protecting adults and children from. Appendix 1 lists forms of abuse and neglect. Appendix 2 lists the many symptoms that can manifest themselves and which it is important to be aware of.

TRAINING & COMMUNICATION

It is important for CRESS staff to be aware of safeguarding issues. This means that they need to be able to describe their own role and responsibilities when it comes to safeguarding issues, and work safely themselves. They need also to be aware of how to respond to safeguarding situations.

CRESS safeguarding policy recommends that all staff have C0 Safeguarding Awareness training and C1 Foundation Safeguarding training, and that at least two members of staff are trained to C2 Safeguarding for Leaders.

It is also a requirement that all CRESS key staff and overseas visitors who are working directly with vulnerable people will be DBS cleared.

Initially all staff must complete C0 Safeguarding Awareness training which can be accessed on-line via the safeguarding training portal of the Church of England. Further training for key staff having contact with vulnerable people are encouraged to undertake the C1 Foundation Safeguarding training courses which can be completed online or are regularly held by the Church of England safeguarding trainers within the Benefice and C2 Safeguarding Leadership courses held within the Diocese. Those who complete C1 and C2 training will be required to update their training every three years. Dr Jane Guy, designated safeguarding officer (DSO) for CRESS, has been trained to C3 level.

CRESS is aware that there also needs to be a focus on safe working practices with safeguarding issues in mind. Key staffs often work and pray in small groups in private homes. It is important that they feel safe at all times. Safer recruitment involves communicating this policy to all new key staff.

Communicating safeguarding issues within CRESS is facilitated due to the way CRESS works as a Christian organisation through regular private meetings, prayer group meetings and an embedded ethos of mutual understanding and support for each other.

CRESS expects key staff to behave in such a way as to protect the professional integrity of CRESS when dealing with CRESS matters.

PROCEDURES & REPORTING (INCLUDE FORM)

CRESS key staff needs to know what constitutes safeguarding information such as recognising signs of abuse or neglect, or of disclosure. If they encounter evidence of such signs of abuse or neglect, they then have a responsibility to report this to the designated safeguarding officer who will then refer when necessary to safeguarding contacts in the police or social services. If staff or volunteers have a safeguarding concern they should contact the CRESS designated safeguarding officer (DSO), Dr Jane Guy. If Jane is not available they should contact Dr Johnathan Cullis. It is then the responsibility of the DSO to fill out a Safeguarding Incident Recording Form – see Appendix 3.

MONITORING & POLICY REVIEW

Continued monitoring of this policy will take place at regular intervals by the Chief Executive Officer of CRESS.

A formal review with the Chief Executive of CRESS and its trustees will take place every three years to ensure that this policy is fit for purpose and meets the requirements of current legislation. .
